Mutual Funds involve risk including the possible loss of principal. ETFs in which the Fund invests will not be able to replicate exactly the performance of the indices they track and may result in a loss. The earnings and prospects of small and medium sized companies are more volatile than larger companies and may experience higher failure rates than larger companies. There is a risk that issuers and counter parties will not make payments on securities and other investments held by the Fund, resulting in losses to the Fund. The Fund may engage in short sales which may increase the risk of loss associated with any appreciation on the price of a security borrowed in connection with a short sale. Derivative instruments involve risks different from, or possibly greater than, the risks associated with investing directly in securities and other traditional investments. Counter-party to a transaction with the Fund may be unable or unwilling to make timely principal, interest or settlement payments, or otherwise honor its obligations. Investments in foreign securities could subject the Fund to greater risks including, currency fluctuation, economic conditions, and different governmental and accounting standards.

In addition to the risks generally associated with investing in securities of foreign companies, countries with emerging markets also may have relatively unstable governments, social and legal systems that do not protect shareholders, economies based on only a few industries, and securities markets that trade a small number of issues. Although hedging is intended to limit or reduce investment risk, hedging strategies may also limit or reduce the potential for profit. Investments in lesser-known, small and medium capitalization companies may be more vulnerable than larger, more established organizations. The Adviser may be incorrect in its assessment of the intrinsic value of the securities the Fund holds which may result in a decline in the value of Fund shares. The models used by the Fund to determine or guide investment decisions may not achieve the objectives of the Fund. Increased portfolio turnover may result in higher brokerage commissions, dealer mark-ups and other transaction costs and may result in taxable capital gains.
